7132 Hotel in brief

The 7132 Hotel is located at the entrance to the picturesque village of Vals in Switzerland's Grisons Alps – a place of idyllic scenery and an ancient mountain setting with space for future visions. Famous for its thermal springs, Vals is a calm retreat within which the 7132 Hotel offers a thoroughly distinctive atmosphere. Guests at the 7132 Hotel escape the mediocrity of the mainstream and are treated to the last true luxuries of our hectic modern era: leisure, tranquility and relaxation. This is a place to unwind, indulge yourself and savour the moment in an inspiring and stylish setting. The 7132 is committed to everything that appeals to the senses: exceptional architecture and design, exquisite cuisine and a world-class thermal spa. The final phase of the most recent renovations was completed in July 2017. In addition to the new rooms described below, the reception and lobby area have been completely redesigned, as have the bar and the entire hotel grounds, including the pavilion and sun decks. A spacious library with an open fireplace has also been added. To underscore the hotel's all-year-round appeal, four exclusive meeting rooms have been created, providing space for up to 40 people.

It was the unique quality of Vals that provided the inspiration for a new name. 7132 is the postcode of the municipality and has become the trademark of a new tourism concept: The stated aim is to move away from mass tourism and instead preserve the authentic, exclusive nature of what Vals has to offer. All of the company's activities now operate under this name – or rather this number.

7132 Thermal Baths

The legendary thermal springs are what makes Vals unique. The highly mineralised water that emerges at 30 °Celsius from St. Peter's spring has attracted visitors to the spa for more than 100 years. In 1996 architect Peter Zumthor rose to international fame with his design for a new spa complex. Consisting of raw concrete and 60,000 slabs of local quartzite stone, the monolithic building is an architectural tribute to the archaic beauty of the Vals valley. It has been acclaimed by leading architecture critics worldwide. Peter Zumthor was awarded the Pritzker Prize in 2009.

Rooms

The hotel consists of two buildings: the 5-star 7132 Hotel Deluxe and the adjacent 4-star House of Architects by 7132 featuring a unique collection of rooms designed by renowned architects: Tadao Ando, Peter Zumthor, Kengo Kuma and Thom Mayne.

7132 Hotel Deluxe

The 7132 Hotel Deluxe reopened in July 2017, boasting three Spa Suites (90 m²) and 12 Spa Deluxe rooms (60 m²), each of which features a steam bath in the bath-room. There are also three new double rooms (30 m²) and one single room (25 m²), commanding stunning views. Three supremely elegant Penthouse Suites (90 m²) based on designs by Japanese star architect Kengo Kuma are housed on the upper floor. The rates for the 7132 Hotel Deluxe Penthouse Suites include transfer to Vals by helicopter.

House of Architects by 7132

Zumthor

The Zumthor rooms were created by Peter Zumthor. Scagliola is a plasterwork technique of the Italian Renaissance. The rooms feature hand-painted Habutai silk curtains.

Kuma

Kengo Kuma's work pays tribute to the refined craftsmanship of Japanese cabinet-makers. Guests are embraced by a cocoon of oak, while the centre of the room features an elegant glass shower with a floor-level base fashioned from Vals stone.

Ando

The 7132 was able to call on the services of master architect Tadao Ando to design a set of rooms for the House of Architects by 7132. His design is a homage to the subtle beauty of Japanese tea houses.

Mayne

Designs by American architect Thom Mayne augmented the House of Architects by 7132 in 2016. Following Zumthor and Ando, he is the third Pritzker Prize laureate to realise some of his visions in Vals.

Gastronomy

Each of the restaurants at the 7132 Hotel shares a passion for premium ingredients, cuisine of the highest quality and personalised service.

Inspired by nature itself, he conjures up unique culinary creations that are a world away from mainstream cuisine.

7132 Red

7132 Blue Bar

7132 DaPapà

The DaPapà team celebrates Italian dolce vita with the best pasta and pizza for miles around. The authentic furniture and black-and-white photographs on the walls are reminiscent of Cinecittà masterpieces and take us back to the era of Federico Fellini.

History

The first written references to the curative effects of Vals' thermal springs date back to the 17th century. Doctors in the 19th century recommended therapeutic baths in Vals to treat dermatological conditions. Recreational tourism became the focus in 1964, when German industrialist Kurt Vorlop transformed the original sanatorium into a modern health resort.

In 1983, the municipality of Vals purchased the hotel along with the thermal baths and commissioned Grisons architect Peter Zumthor to design a new spa. When the baths re-opened in 1996 the news spread around the world, and critics praised Zumthor's work as a 'lesson in courage and aesthetics'. It was only natural for the baths to be declared a national monument in 1998, just two years after they re- opened.

The municipality sold the hotel and baths in 2012. This step became necessary due to changing tourism demands and the resulting need for fresh investment. New owner Remo Stoffel, a native of Vals, has since invested in the future of the resort.

The village's postcode served as inspiration for a new name: 7132

The entire complex has been renovated and expanded in order to meet the expectations of a discerning contemporary clientele. Plans featuring further avant-garde projects are also slated with the aim of enhancing the image of Vals as a mecca of architecture.
